Dear Families,

It's getting rainy and the leaves have hit the ground...but that doesn't stop us from having fun outside! Thank you for sending your children to school with waterproof boots and coats and whatever other gear feels appropriate for the day. Thank you for your support and partnership always.

This week we honoured Remembrance Day with lessons in the classroom and a schoolwide assembly on Monday morning. And we learned that peace is not just something big that happens far away. Peace begins with us. Peace starts with the choices we make every single day. Students were encouraged to help a friend, solve a problem with words instead of anger, and stand up for someone who needs help. That is how we can show care for ourselves, others, and this place—those are all ways of building peace. I encourage you to continue this discussion at home. How can we be peaceful at home and at school?

Have a lovely weekend,

Ms. Zvi and Ms. Sood

10 TIPS TO KEEP YOUR KIDS SAFE ONLINE

Not everyone is who they say they are.

Remind your child that online, anyone they don't know in real life, is still a stranger, even if they have been talking to them for a while.

Don't overshare.

Talk to your child about what personal information should never be shared on apps and in chats, including their full name, age, city, school and photos.

There are no free gifts.

Let your child know that if someone offers free in-game currency, money, or virtual gift cards, it's a BIG RED FLAG and could be a tactic to gain trust or manipulate them.

Don't switch platforms.

Explain to your child that switching from a game to a social media app is a common tactic used by exploiters to get closer to a child and avoid detection.

NEVER meet in real life.

Tell your child they should never meet an online friend in person without your knowledge and consent—and only if a trusted adult is present.

Show curiosity!

Just like you ask your child what they did in school, ask them about what they like to do online, which games they play, and who they are connecting with.

Set clear boundaries and monitor.

Know which apps your child uses, enable safety features, and talk about online rules. For kids under ten, we recommend that an adult monitor all online activities.

Be a safe person.

Many kids don't ask for help because they're afraid they'll get in trouble or have their screen privileges taken away. Let them know they can come to you—no matter what—without fear of punishment or losing screen time. Your support matters most.

Create a safety plan.

With your child, work out what they should do if someone makes them feel uncomfortable or unsafe online: block, report, and tell a trusted adult.

Check in regularly.

If your child is engaging in risky online behavior, talk to them about why it's unsafe and work together to find a safer way forward.
